CHAPTER VI (Continued.)

They were nearing the end of dinner. Roland, reasoning to himself from the character of his host, had counted upon a first-rate meal, and he had not been deceived. The dinner was admirable, and the service not less so, being in the hands of Mr. Friar's butler-valet, Missenden, without whom his employer absolutely refused to travel. Missenden was a Jew, something of a linguist, rather tall, very slim, of unknown age; he lived in an impregnable moral enclosure of his own, where nobody—except possibly Mr. Friar—had ever been able to get at him; whether he and Mr. Friar conversed like human beings, when the latter received Missenden in his bedroom before breakfast, and if so what they said to each other, none knew except themselves. The social atmosphere of the dinner was delightful to Roland, and he gave the chief credit for it to Mr. Friar, who obviously set the tone of the table. Roland was the sole guest; he was admitted to the inmost domesticity of the family, and he wondered why. He was meeting Phoebe only for the fourth time, and her parents for the second time. That he had favourably impressed the parents at their previous encounter he was bound to believe, though Mr. Friar had spoken but very little with him, and Roland's impression of the father had certainly not been favourable; it might indeed have been called unfavourable. In the sitting-room, however, Mr. Friar had completely won the younger man. And his remark about being very careful as to his society at dinner was proof enough that at Nancy's, Roland had passed an examination—possibly with honours. On the other hand, in view of Phoebe's teasing question, "Has daddy made his usual conquest?" Roland suspected that daddy might be a professional charmer, who charmed for his own purposes. Mr. Friar and Phoebe had sparred throughout the meal, but lovingly, and with not a single lapse from affectionate urbanity. It was evident that they deeply appreciated each other.

"I suppose you will soon be going away for a holiday, Mr. Smith?" asked Mr. Friar. "August is upon us in full blast."

"I hope so," Roland replied.

"Where shall you go?"

"Perhaps for a sea-voyage, but I don't know."

"I know exactly where I'm going," said Mr. Friar. "Cornwall, I mean the Cornwall that is beyond railways, between Penzance and Land's End. It's the only fragment of England that is habitable in August. I say nothing of Wales, because Wales is a foreign country still embedded in the fifteenth century. We have a house in Cornwall, and it will shelter my wife and myself during the most inclement and obnoxious four weeks of the year. "Father!" Phoebe exploded. "You just can't do it. You can't leave me alone in London in August. London's empty."

"But only yesterday you were telling me that August is now reckoned one of the best theatrical months. True, in my time all respectable theatres were closed in August, as they still are in Paris. Now you say London will be empty. You may be able to reconcile those two statements. But I can only reconcile them on the theory that a pretty woman—I dare say an ugly one too—has the capacity to believe whatever it suits her to believe at any given moment."

Mrs. Friar glanced smilingly from her husband to her daughter, and back again, expectant. Roland finished his port, also expectant.

"You've never even hinted to me you'd be running away," Phoebe protested, crestfallen.

"My sweet pet, did you even hint to your mother and me that you'd deprive us of your society by staying in America for five years? And didn't you return in the end without giving us any notice at all? So that your wiles found us in Czechoslovakia. I don't blame you for that, because you're an actress, and an actress simply has to behave like that. If she didn't, if she wasn't impulsive and unpredictable, she wouldn't be an actress. You must look the facts in the face. You've managed brilliantly without us for five years. Surely you can go on for another month. And nobody knows better than you that we shall miss you far more than you'll miss us. And if the play's a failure you can skim towards us in half a dozen hours. Think of the joy that will give us."

"But who says the play will be a failure?" Phoebe protested.

"You do. You've said every morning, and every night for a week past. At any rate we'll stay here in empty London until your first night. At any cost of health we couldn't miss two of your first-nights running. Now come along, sole fruit of my loins, and we'll muddle through a duet together. Mr. Smith, in this house we ignore the barbaric British custom of separating the sexes after a sound meal. I hope you don't mind."

Mr. Friar rose and seized his daughter, who was on his left, and hugged and kissed her, and led her out of the room. The other two followed, exchanging looks appreciative of the display.

In the long drawing-room, islanded with lamps, Mrs. Friar and Roland sat down in the smaller half, separated from the large half by an imperfectly closed glass partition through which they could hear the overture to "The Magic Flute." Mr. Friar was presiding at the upper register of the piano. "They hate an audience," Mrs. Friar delicately murmured. "They won't see us from here."

She had produced a cigar-box from a cabinet and begged Roland to smoke. He had not dared to smoke earlier, because he surmised that Mr. Friar was the sort of man who would regard the mixing of tobacco with port as a crime which would prove extremely prejudicial on the Day of Judgment. Silence in the smaller half of the drawing-room. The duet was very crisp and joyous. Not a wrong note. Not a missed beat.

Said Mrs. Friar softly:

"You've no idea the things those two say to one another, Mr. Smith. Percival will say things to her he wouldn't dream of saying to me. I mean the kind of things the consort would never pass in a play—if you understand."

"Quite!" said Roland, thinking of Mr. Friar's manner of referring to the attempted pouncing seduction. "They're a law to themselves, but it's delicious to watch them together."

Mrs. Friar thanked him with a very intimate smile.

"I like cigar-smoke," she murmured, observing that Roland turned away from her in order to puff. She went on: "I'm one of those who believe that a wife's first duty is to her husband. But I must say I don't quite like leaving the child here all alone. You know the theatre, Mr. Smith. Do you think it will be all right?"

He guessed that she was worrying a little about the symptomatic antics of Alfred Escott.

"Oh yes. Absolutely all right."

"Of course Percy must go away. He must. But with nobody in London!" She spoke as though Roland's remark had not in the least reassured her.

"Well, the company will be in London, and she'll have friends in the company—bound to," Mrs.

Friar said nothing. Roland continued: "And I shall be in London, if that's any use."

"But you said you'd be away in August."

"I was forgetting a rather important matter. I don't see how I can leave till September." This was a mere untruth, invented on the instant. He thought, "Why, did I say that? I'm an idiot. I was going away, and I ought to go away. Still, the old lady has to be comforted." Not that here was his reason for the lie. He was picturing Phoebe alone in the flat, dependent, exquisite, irresistible. And he was picturing, further, the sanguinary mess he would make of any prospective pouncer. He grew quite heatedly jealous in defence of Phoebe against all specimens of the pouncing type.

"How nice you are!" said Mrs. Friar, gazing close at him with her humid maternal eyes, thankful and utterly trusting. A marvellous glance that thrilled Roland. "I want you to know that all three of us have the same opinion of you. I won't tell you what it is. If I did Percy would accuse me of being crude. Still—"

The duet finished. To cover his self-consciousness Roland clapped. Father and daughter entered the smaller half hand-in-hand.

"All we ask of our public," said Mr. Friar, "is unmix but sincere praise. Thank you for the hand—I hear that's what they call it, don't they, my sweet pet?" Roland thought, enraptured: "I had a bit of luck in going to that house-warming of Nancy's. I mightn't have gone. That's why they've all three of them accepted me so easily. I'm Nancy's cousin." (To be continued.)

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Typical of the new winter mode are the costumes shown here. The coat at left is of chestnut brown broadcloth with red fox trimming. Since capes and cape effects are more important than ever, note how the collar hugs the neck to give an almost double-collar effect. The coat is unusually form-fitting, and buttons at the side... One of the very popular morning-to-evening costumes which Paris is favouring is pictured in the centre. The skirt is a wrap-around with loose plants in the front, but buttoning down the back. As shown here, it has been let down from a short street costume to a long dinner costume—all by means of a yoke which is hidden under the long blouse. The jacket, which has dolman sleeves, buttons on at the neck to the high-necked sleeveless blouse underneath. When the jacket and hat are removed it becomes a perfect dinner costume. The new classical evening gown, like the one at right, are sleeved. The up-and-down movement of the waistline is carried out to the utmost in this model, with high neck in front and low back.

VERY PLEASING.

Attractive Candle-Shades.

Just what we want in the way of candle shades is, only too often, marked at a price that makes us turn with a sigh of resignation to a second, or even third, best. Sometimes, however, a sudden determination to have shades that really please will lead the more enterprising among us to set about making our own, and the amateur who once achieves success in this direction will reckon her trouble extremely well paid by the result. The materials are quite inexpensive, no matter whether we choose silk, parchment, or paper, and the cutting is perfectly easy, if we follow carefully a few simple directions. As for the decorating, it must depend upon individual taste and skill, but, generally speaking, it is best to attempt very little, for, so long as the colour is attractive, the plainer shades look the best.

Cut in Parchment or Paper.

A sharp pair of scissors, a pair of compasses, and a pencil, will make it easy to cut candle shades of the usual pyramid shape either from parchment or paper. A cylindrical shade is just a straight strip of the required length and width, but a pyramidal shade must be cut as a segment of a circle. To obtain this outline we draw on the paper, or parchment, a circle with a radius of five and a half inches, and with the same centre, a smaller circle with a radius of two inches. The circular strip obtained by cutting on the pencilled lines gives the required shape, and the necessary length can be found by fitting it to the wire support. Two little tabs should be left on one straight edge to overlap the other, and be fastened with a touch of gum, or the fastening can be made by means of tiny clips. To make the wire frame neat, it should first be covered in tissue-paper fastened with gum.

The Decorative Touch.

If painted or applied decoration is intended for the paper shade it should be given before it is gummed into shape. A wash of rose-pink or pale yellow water-colour paint deepening in tint towards the base will give a pleasant effect when the candles are lighted. Or the white background can be varied with a gilt border cut from passe-partout, a fruit or flower design taken from wallpaper or cretonne, or a stencilled design in black.

Vellum shades look very attractive in combination with orange coloured candles and brass candle-sticks, and it is easy to give a parchment effect to strong drawing paper by means of linseed oil. The shade should be fixed to the support to save handling, two coats, with plenty of intervals for drying, should be given, and the

BEAUTY HINTS.

Hands May Need A Touch of Colour.

Rouge was designed primarily for your face, of course. But your hands will take on greater beauty if you give them a touch of colour sometimes.

Look at your elbows. Don't sigh if they have dark circles around them. Elbows have such a habit of sticking themselves into the beauty picture at awkward angles. But you will be able to correct this fault. Rub some cold cream into the skin around the elbow. Massage it thoroughly. Make sure that it is pliable. Now take your rouge, either paste or powder. Paste works easier, though. Apply a little on each side of the elbow bone. The shade protected from dust while it is still oily.

Shades of Silk.

Charming shades are made from silk, satin, or even velvet. Sometimes it is possible to buy Japanese paper shades set in a wooden framework and then the paper panels can be removed and silk ones grafted in their place. Otherwise, a wire support must be used, the wires covered with silk, and the panels filled separately. Narrow ribbons neaten the edges, and felons makes a pretty finish.

result will make your elbow appear dimpled.

If the palms of your hands are as colourless as a glass of warm water before breakfast, add some colour to them. The little mounds below each finger and the inside of your finger tips will take a much more colourful hold on life if touched with rouge. Be sure that the rouge blends. You don't want anyone to think that the remnants of your lipstick have clung to your fingers. It is distasteful to see one finger overly red from smooching lipstick or rouge. Always make sure that your hands are clean. Rouge is a decorative note when used, and should not appear to be a lipstick hangover.

If you are playing bridge you will want your hands to appear lovely. The golden light of the lamps will show up their defects. Rouge will make them keep their glow. You will mark up a high beauty score, whichever way your card game goes.

The prevalent use of gayer nail polishes also favours this new use of rouge for hands. A gleaming rose nail is sadly out of place on a hand that has a dull grey pallor.

Hold some beauty in your hand and see if life doesn't put nicer things into your palm than it has been in the habit of doing.—BY ALICIA HART.

SHORTER HOURS

Not only amongst workers, but in the ranks of economists and statesmen as well, there is a growing tendency to believe in the efficacy of shorter working hours as one means of combating the present worldwide depression. Some little time ago, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labour declared strongly in favour of the shortening of working hours, and discussions between the Government and industrialists concentrated attention upon proposals to curtail working hours by 10% and thus re-absorb three million of the eleven million unemployed. Now the Federation has gone a step further in demanding that the working week and working day be shortened to "whatever extent may be necessary to put all the 11,000,000 jobless to work." It hopes that, acting on these lines, President Hoover will convene a National Economic Conference which the Federation has suggested as the instrument to decide upon the practical measures to be taken.

It is also of interest to note that Mr. Doak, the Secretary of the American Department of Labour, who has already shown himself to be extremely progressive in this sphere, now goes yet another step further, by insisting that the shortening of the hours of work should be regarded not as a crisis measure, but as a means of permanent adjustment to present technical tendencies. He is thus taking the same standpoint as that of the campaign for the shortening of working hours, inaugurated years ago by the International Federation of Trade Unions. When speaking on the subject at a discussion held in the White House between representatives of industrialists, economic sociologists, etc., Mr. Doak said the question of the shorter working week had passed beyond the limitations of a mere depression measure and thought it should be built permanently into American life. He continued:—"I have always favoured a shorter working week and nothing has happened to change my mind. Industry in general seems to favour some such workable plan now, and we are hopeful that we shall be able to show real progress to the end desired in the near future." Now that the International Labour Office of the League of Nations has decided to make the shortening of working hours the subject of a special session of the Governing Body, it is difficult to see why this question should not be treated as a world problem; for no very considerable shortening of hours of work can be carried into effect at once without friction, and without giving rise to dumping unless it is established on the very widest basis.

The idea at the back of the suggestion for shorter hours is, of course, that there should be discovered some equitable means of sharing available work. President Hoover, in endorsing the movement at a recent conference of bankers and industrialists, declared that as a matter of national policy a shortening of hours was necessary, not only to meet the need of the moment, but maybe to take up the slack in the future from the vast sudden advance in labour-saving devices. Coincident with the movement, however, there has sprung up in labour circles a demand that the shorter hours shall be accompanied by a marked increase in wage standards. Here, however, we touch a point of economics which presents considerable difficulty. To endeavour to secure an equitable sharing of work is one thing, but to complicate the situation by wholesale increases in wages is quite another, and the question naturally arises whether industry could, in these days, stand the strain of extra overhead.

London at its Best.

Travellers who drift in for a brief look-round tell these days, how bright London is looking and feeling, compared with anywhere abroad. The visitor to London from New York, British or American, who descends lyrically on this theme has ceased to be interesting. There are good grounds for this enthusiasm. The old capital, which a year or so ago seemed slipping into its decline, has made a marvellous recovery. All hotels report first-class business, and the property market says that things are really looking up. But even when Paris was at its best and New York at its peopled, London was always the incomparable capital. The volume of life, events and interests there overshadows that of any other city, and will continue to do so. But for licensing kill-joys, London would add an external gaiety to its more solid attractions. This wretched fraternity seems to have been temporarily checked. In its attempt to reimpose ten o'clock closing on all southern resorts during the summer. But they are always there, tapping away at gaieties and liberties, like the patient death-watch beetle in the timbers of ancient buildings. Here is something for youth to take up as a crusade, but youth seems to be on the one hand too languid and on the other too crazy. A new young crowd, we are told, called the Prometheans, are out to sweep away all present institutions in morals, marriage and the rest, and substitute the sort of code which passes for life in the current smart novel devoted to the Bright Young People type. These young persons of course, have all the freedom they want at their own cocktail parties. They might be worth all-room if they would drop their own privileged nonsense and work for the crowd. But that would be probably too sane for the cocktail brigade.

DAY BY DAY

THOSE IGNORANT OF ANY SUBJECT ARE OFTEN THE READIEST TO THOROW ABOUT IT, BECAUSE LEAST HAMPERED BY EXACT KNOWLEDGE.—Proctor.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lindsell and Mr. W. G. Lorimer were among the passengers who left by the P. and O. s.s. Carthage on Saturday.

A lecture on "The Function of the Foreign Importers in the Trade of South China" is to be delivered by Mr. P. S. Cassidy on Tuesday, 18th, October, at 8.30 p.m. in the Union Assembly Room of the University. All interested are welcome.

After being rescued from the harbour, into which she had jumped in an attempt to commit suicide at West Point, a Chinese woman was sent to the Government Civil Hospital suffering from the effects of immersion. She was rescued by an Indian watchman.

A prominent and well-known hostess in European society circles, Mrs. Wellington Koo, the wife of the Chinese Minister to France, arrived in Hongkong yesterday on the Felix Roussy from Saigon. She will leave on the same boat for Shanghai en route to France to join her husband there.

Suffering from internal injuries received as the result of a fall on the roof of the China Cement Manufacturing Co., of Puk Wah Street, an employee was removed to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday for treatment. He was carrying a plank of wood when he slipped and fell a height of twenty feet.

A double-billed programme, full of interest, is now being provided by the King's Theatre management, and during the week-end it deservedly drew large audiences. The main film is the screen adaptation of Zane Grey's "Riders of the Purple Sage," a typical Western study of the orthodox kind, noteworthy for the excellent acting of George O'Brien and Marguerite Churchill, as well as for the fine scenic features. The latter part of the programme is taken up by the Joy Fun Toy Company of Chinese jugglers and acrobats, who present a really amazing show in which there is never a dull minute. This feature alone is worth the admission charges. Seldom has such clever work been seen in the Colony.

ROSE ROOM REOPENS

BRILLIANT SPECTACLE AT PENINSULA HOTEL

Over 400 revellers flocked to the Peninsula Hotel on Saturday night to attend the gala signalling the re-opening of the Rose Room. It was a brilliant spectacle with the newly-decorated ballroom offering a perfect background.

An unusually attractive cabaret programme was staged by the management, including the first appearance in Hongkong of Hugo and Josephine, two polished dancers, who gave delightful displays of the tango and waltz. The "Congorilla" prizes were given by the Fox Films, was a very popular and joyous affair. At least 100 couples took the floor and gave the judges an almost impossible task. The prizes were awarded to Miss Lane and Miss Lammert.

The event was one of the most successful of the year, and also one of the most enjoyable.

"I'm not at all satisfied with the way my face turned out—and I intend to show it to all my friends."

TRAIN THEM TO BE COMPETENT WIVES

By F. E. BAILY

Little as it seems to be realised nowadays, a married woman's is a highly skilled occupation. She is responsible for what the Army calls the Q branch, and with all respect to dashing squadron leaders with leopard-skins entangled in their saddlery it is the Q branch which wins battles.

The successful married woman must be a skilled administrator and economist, with a definite gift for handling people of differing temperaments, and setting a healthy and cheerful tone in the home. She must understand food, fabrics, and furnishing, simple domestic medicine and elementary nursing, and have a comprehensive knowledge of children from babyhood onward.

No Preparation.

She needs personality and social skill, because a home is not a hermitage; it makes many contacts with the outside world. If she is rich enough to keep a maid or maids she should be capable of doing any job that falls to any maid at least as well as the maid herself, for an employer must be able to show a maid how if necessary.

These things form the administrative side of a married woman's life, apart from loving and cherishing her husband, and according to whether she is equal or unequal to them her marriage will succeed or fail.

I know a modest number of young women, most of them earning their living at various jobs, all of whom hope to marry. How one of them made the slightest practical preparation for turning herself into a competent wife or mother? She has not. None of them knows much about housecraft, marketing for a family, keeping household accounts, motherhood, or wifehood.

I doubt if one of them could say off-hand how much per head per week it costs to feed a household (a) well, and (b) adequately but without any frills. When one of them marries and is going to have a baby she will often write to the Editors of the Women's Page of The Daily Mail for information about the care of babies which she ought to have acquired long ago in preparation for marriage.

Ignores Technique.

A conscientious person wouldn't buy a dog if he knew as little about dogs as the average girl looking round for a husband knows about babies and homecraft generally.

I suggest that the average young woman of to-day completely ignores the technique of wifehood because of her absurd bringing up.

The daughter of wealthy parents starts life with a nurse, and then acquires a governess. Every mortal thing is done for her. Later she goes to school, either to a preparatory or public school. Judging from the specimens they turn out who have come under my notice, girls' public schools are queer places modelled on lines of boys' public schools, where the ideal dangled before the raw young female savage is to get her first eleven cricket or hockey colours, and no one is taught to spell.

In the holidays the public schoolgirl naturally desires a good time. When she leaves school she either goes on to the university, spends a year being "finished" in Paris, or obtains some sort of job and looks round for a husband.

Of all that a wife and prospective mother should know she knows nothing.

The less well off middle-class girl who attends a high school or secondary school is in much the same predicament. True, she lives at home and sees something of the mechanism of a household, but she has a long day at school, with homework in the evening, and her mother hesitates to add household training to all this. In such households when a girl leaves school she must find work, and after her day's work she is not inclined for more domestic undertakings than doing her own sewing and straightening up her own room.

The only girls who get much insight into the realities of a married woman's life are the children of the poor. From force of circumstances they have to help look after their smaller brothers and sisters when little more than toddlers themselves, and at least they learn from practical experience at an early age how to bath and take care of a baby. They discover also something about the cost of living, and how far one can make a shilling go if one has to.

A Stupid System.

In the youth of our parents these things were not so. Girls of the wealthy and middle classes remained at home and were trained by their mothers. At some time of these girls' lives the household usually included a baby and they learned how to look after it, just as the children of the poor do now. But in the present era of flats and small families, when the custom is to give girls a highly literary education and send them away to school, they have no chance of fitting themselves to be wives and mothers, given the usual school curriculum.

I don't blame the modern young woman altogether. She is partly the victim of a peculiarly stupid system. The average girl would rather play with a baby than play cricket, because she has a natural instinct for babies and no natural instinct for cricket. The educational system for girls in this country seems to me quite frankly ridiculous. Since the day of home life for girls in a fairly large household has departed, the training they need to have in a household should be replaced by their school training.

I would like to see far more time devoted to lectures on housecraft and domestic science by visiting experts, and a liaison between the crack girls' public schools and all other girls' schools and the nearest infant welfare centres, where the girls could see real live babies and modern methods of baby care.

Learning Her Job.

To become a competent wife and mother is about the most important job a girl can do, and she ought to be given the chance to learn her job. The best she can manage at present is to go to the movies, watch the latest most admired "cutie" of the screen, and pick up hints on vamping a husband.

To say that men don't study to prepare themselves for fatherhood is beside the point. A man's job is mostly earning the family living. If the woman he marries is incompetent as a wife and mother he cannot possibly make up for her failure in the home.

THIS FIVE YEAR PLAN

By Edward Kellyski, Bolshevik.

This Colony needs a five Year Plan. Properly speeded up we could get through it in three years, and spend the other two watching it work.

Anyhow, there's no harm in giving it a trial for a few months, before the weather gets cold.

Start in your own home, working from the front. At present you have one front door. By this time next year you should have two front doors. At the end of five years you should have five front doors, all in a row.

Five keyholes in the front doors sounds a bit awkward. Of course, a man will have five keys, but then there's the occasions when you come home late and there are ten keyholes and none of the five keys will fit them. The main thing to do in a case like that is to keep cool. Don't lose your head.

It may take you five years to get in, but by that time she'll have forgotten you, and you can just drop in as a casual visitor.

It will be understood that these are minor details, intended merely—

TANTALISING DISPLAY BY SOUTH CHINA

their passing and dribbling tricks without making a serious effort to score further goals, the defence snatched off to such an extent that in the last ten minutes they all but collapsed. The R.A. developed a new lease of life and when South China sought to recover the team balance they had allowed to slide away, two lines were too much. Had there been any R.A. forward with a shot in his locker, the soldiers could not only have saved the match, but would probably have won. On six or seven occasions they were within an ace of a goal. They failed largely because of attempts to carry the ball within two inches of the goal-line before shooting. Gough on one occasion hit the inside of the left-hand post only to see the ball return into play.

OUTCLASSED.

But for the liveliness provided by the R.A.'s final, but fruitless, sprint, the second half would not have been worth sitting through. The R.A. were thoroughly outclassed as far as football was concerned and apparently realising it, sought to prevent South China from playing football.

In this their powerfully-built side was quite successful, but the event reflected no credit upon them. The Artillerymen were too hasty and careless in all their passing and passing to make any impression upon a soundly-balanced side, as South China undoubtedly were up to the interval. Kick-and-rush tactics were broken up before the R.A. forwards had passed through the South China half-back line, with the result that the Chinese goalkeeper had only one shot to save in the whole of the first half. Gough and Bryant tried hard, while Walker and Taylor were powerful backs, kicking and tackling determinedly, and covering each other ideally. The half-backs were beaten for pace too often to show up prominently. Slowness in turning was the most noticeable feature of their play.

LEE WAI TONG AGAIN.

South China always had their opponents in difficulties in the first half. The least said is soonest mended, the better. Lee Wai-tong and Ip Pui-wai constantly fed reached their best form and it was the dazzling work of this pair that brought the victory. Cheng Si-hong also did capital work, his cross being well-nigh perfect. Several were allowed to pass right across the goalmouth being neither pushed in by South China's forwards or out by the R.A. defenders.

At half-back, Tong Kwan, Wong Mei-shan and Leung Wing-chiu gave nothing away. Leung Wing-chiu excelled, supporting his forwards admirably. Lau Mau was the better of the backs, Leung Lu-chiu being far from impressive. Liu Yuen-chun formed the goal impression he created firmly dangerous in the last ten minutes.

JUNIORS OF PROMISE.

Incidentally, I was much struck by the promise of some of the players in the Ewo side in the preceding junior game. The skilful ball control of the forwards was astonishing and the pace of the whole game was something of an eye-opener. It was, however, the pace that destroyed the effectiveness of Ewo. The material for a very classy side is there, I am quite certain, if they only had someone to coach them into the need for a little deliberation. They lost the match solely because they were too hurried in everything they did—"Wanderer."

NEAT FORWARDS

Impressive Debut by the Lincolns

The Lincolns can be well satisfied with their first appearance in Hongkong league football. Quite apart from the fact that they trounced the Police to the tune of 6-1 on Saturday, they gave sufficient indications to satisfy one that they by no means attained their highest standard. The most impressive part of the team was the machine-like forward line, which not only worked together with rare understanding, but proved conclusively that it was composed of men who could shoot and shoot straight. It was this absolute divergence between the two teams which accounted for such a wide margin in the "goals scored" column. As a team the Police were not five goals inferior, but they failed to seize opportunities and paid the penalty.

GOOD AND BAD.

Harding was brilliant at inside right for the soldiers, although in this department there were no weak spots. The half backs played perfect football at intervals, but they also had their bad moments and were inclined to falter under sustained pressure. Similar remarks apply to Ash and Turner the Lincoln backs, but Heath was very safe and there was quality and confidence stamping all his work.

Johnston, the new Police centre-forward came right up to expecta-

FRIENDLY MATCHES.

"Y" Ladies Lose
Although they were beaten by five goals to one by the Y.M.C.A. "A" team at King's Park on Saturday, the "Y" Ladies were by no means disgraced. They combined well and their only goal was netted by Miss O. Dalziel. The scorers of the men's team were H. S. Homers (2), G. H. Fowler (2) and C. Balman.

After their game with the ladies, the Y.M.C.A. "A" engaged in a game with H.M.S. Folkestone, and were defeated by four goals to one. The Navy men deserved their victory and throughout played a good fast game. The only goal for the Y.M.C.A. was scored by Somers.

St. Andrew's Ladies.
By the only goal scored St. Andrew's Ladies, defeated the Club de Recreio Ladies on the Marina ground on Saturday. Although the exchanges were even the play was scrappy. Miss M. Woolley netted the only goal.

A Heavy Score.
The Radio Sports Club ran out winners by eight goals to one when they met H.M.S. Witch at Caroline Hill on Saturday.

INTERPORT POLO.

Shanghai Team Coming to Hongkong.

Information has been received to the effect that the Shanghai Polo Club is sending an Interport Polo Team to Hongkong to compete for the Kewick Cup. Their ponies are due here to-morrow, and the team itself arrives by the Empress of Japan on Friday next.

At the request of the Shanghai Polo Club the match will be played on Friday, the 14th, at 3 p.m. weather permitting.

Although the local club has not been definitely advised, it is understood that the majority of the members of the Shanghai team have been chosen from the American team which has made such a brilliant reputation for itself in Shanghai. The members of the Hongkong team which will compete for the Kewick Cup will be: Captain P. L. Villar (Captain), F. A. Pollock, Major J. R. Barry, and J. Kewick.

It is expected that not only the members of the Polo Club and the friends, but also many others in the Colony interested in Polo will see what promises to be an interesting match. It may be stated for the benefit of newcomers that the Polo Club is at Causeway Bay, tents adjoining the club pavilion, and the Band of the 1st Battalion 24th Regiment, by kind permission of Lieutenant Colonel G. T. Raikes, D. S. O. and officers, will play during the afternoon.

FAIR RESULT BORDERERS SHARE POINTS

Taking the lead in the second half and then attacking hotly at the finish after the Chinese Athletic had equalised, the S. W. Borderers might well have brought away a couple of league points yesterday, but on the whole the result was a very fair one.

The Borderers held the full measure of the Athletic and a little cool-headed play would have brought its reward in the closing stages of the game, which was fought out at a terrific pace.

Ho Ka-cheung opened the scoring for the Athletic, but Jones very soon put the soldiers on level terms, and although both goals were subject to severe pressure, the score remained unaltered at the interval.

A flying start saw the Borderers capture an early lead after the change-over, Davies beating Wong with a low shot. Ho Ka-cheung equalised for the Athletic, but thereafter the Borderers enjoyed the balance of the play and should have scored again.

IRISH JUDGE ATTACKS REPUBLICANS

SACRIFICING THE NATION

An outspoken attack on the Irish Republicans was made from the Bench at Dundalk by Judge Goff.

Referring to the glut of civil bills he declared:

"If the farmer cannot dispose of his produce or livestock, or can dispose of it only at a sacrifice, he will be unable to pay his annuity, rates and shop debts.

"The shopkeeper, not receiving his due, will be unable to meet his liability to the wholesaler, the State and the local authorities, while the workers, hit on all sides, will be unable to pay their rent and other charges.

"It is obvious in such circumstances no court could, with justice, be expected to grant the immediate execution of decrees in contract or in ejectment, where it is clear that the default is due to the economic situation.

"Awful Prospect."

"We all know, and we should not be afraid to say it, that the present situation and the awful prospect it holds for us, are viewed with equanimity only by the forces of disorder inimical both to the State and Church. They alone hope to profit from it.

"I shall be much surprised, however, if our Christians sacrifice themselves and their country to make a Saor Eire (a Republican organisation) holiday to rejoice the hearts of revolutionaries in Moscow."

Trade statistics issued by the Department of Industry of Commerce in Dublin show that in the first seven months of the year imports fell by nearly £2,000,000 and exports by nearly £3,000,000 as compared with the corresponding period of last year.

Details of trade since the beginning of the tariff war are not given.

GRACIE FIELDS' ADVENTURE

SHUT UP IN BIG SWEEP DRUM

Miss Gracie Fields, who is appearing in Dublin, had an alarming experience at the Irish Sweepstake headquarters.

With members of her company, she had visited the Plaza, and after inspecting the giant drum, Mr. O'Sheehan, director of the draw, took the party to see other attractions.

Miss Fields, however, returned to the stage, and got inside the drum to examine its interior.

Meanwhile the drum engineer, and Mr. Martin Murphy, who is building the "magic boat" structure round the drum, resumed work, which involved the drum being turned to a new working position.

When the drum began to revolve Miss Fields announced her presence by screaming at her top note, and the drum was stopped. With difficulty she was rescued, more scared than hurt, although somewhat shaken.

THIS FIVE YEAR PLAN

ly as a guide to the working of the Plan.

Let us all lie down and put our shoulders to the wheel and pull.

More production! At least a fifty per cent increase in everything. If you have five children now, set yourself out to have seven and a half children by next October.

Get more bills. By 1937 every household should have at least 35 electricity meters, each registering fifty per cent, greater consumption.

And don't forget the Medical profession. Grow more appendices. Big ones! With KNOBS on. Eat seeds, and trousers buttons, and things.

Break your ankle. Tear your ligaments. Do something.

If you have been setting your alarm clock at six o'clock, don't be satisfied with that. Set it at ten. Increased! Multiply! Go forth. Remember you are a cog in a great world-wide industrial machine, and by pulling together we will turn the corner which leads on to a brighter to-morrow, always keeping in mind that there is no cloud without a silver lining, and it is always darkest before the dawn.

Do your bit. This means YOU!

WORKMANLIKE TEAM

EFFECTIVE PLAY BY THE CLUB

(By "VERITAS".)

Club ..... 5 Recreio ..... 0

With a strengthening of the right wing position and concentration on better cohesion between half backs and forwards, the Hongkong Club first string should settle down into a distinctly formidable side.

In their first serious encounter of the season on Saturday—opposed to the Recreio in the league—they won handsomely by 5 goals to nil and displayed confidence in themselves to warrant confidence in them.

Saturday showed a general quickening-up of ball distribution and in their method of attack, although these attributes were not allowed their full value because of the comparatively poor constructive work of the intermediates.

This has always been a weakness of the Club team. The rear-guard can break up an attack as well as anybody, but when it comes to finishing their work with well directed and accurately paced passes, they go right astray. It is a shortcoming which can easily be remedied and will do a tremendous amount in strengthening the whole team.

NO WEAK SPOTS.

Judged by their work on Saturday the Club have practically no weak spots individually. Rodgers kept a typical goal, and it was as well he was in good form for the fast and enterprising Recreio forwards gave him a severe testing in the first half. His habit of advancing beyond goal a couple of yards in anticipation of an attack about danger for those on the touchline, but he always manages to cover himself well. Nevertheless I think he could lose this habit without suffering anything in custodianship.

Martin and S. Rogers were a robust pair of backs and made no mistakes, although their kicking under pressure was not altogether satisfactory. Once they have developed a thorough understanding they will be two of the best defenders in the league.

CLEVER YOUNG HALFBACK.

Having already referred to the half backs it is only necessary for me to add that Desmond Hynes, the Club right half was the finest intermediate on the field, and the Club have every cause to feel satisfied with having retained such a promising young player. His tackling was full of purpose and splendidly carried out. He completely held the whip hand of the Recreio left wing, and it was only fitting that he should crown a good afternoon's work with a magnificent goal.

Skinner was a trifle slow in the pivotal position and lacks proper ball distribution, whilst Duncan was an usual self on the left.

Howe was not in real form, but led the forwards well. He came into his own in the second half, sending his wings away with brilliant opening-up passes, and his body swerving made him the most dangerous player on the field when on the run.

DEFINITE ASSET.

Dominy the old Kowloon player is going to prove a definite asset. He is a rare opportunist, shoots well with both feet and knows where the goal is. G. Duncan's inaptitude on the line made the right wing less effective than it should have been, and an improvement is needed in this position if the forwards are to settle down into a virile attack.

Strangely relied on speed and an insatiable hunger for work to keep him in the limelight, in addition to which he scored a spectacular goal. Fowler on the left wing, though young and lacking experience, has the makings of a useful player and should yield good results to some judicious coaching.

RECREIO'S BEST.

The scores are not a fair reflex of the game, for it was not until midway through the second half that the Recreio began to crack. Until then they held their own well. Obviously lacking the genius and leadership of the Gosano brothers, the youthful team set about their task in a refreshing spirit and in the first half very nearly broke down the home defence. Silva-Netto played a gallant game at left back, and Figueredo proved himself a capable successor to A. Gosano at centre-half. Lack of weight and overzealousness robbed the Recreio forwards of goals. I see no reason why they should not rectify this error and shape into a useful team.

Hynes netted the only goal scored in the first half, and later Fowler, Strang and Dominy (2) completed the scoring.

THE BRIGHTEST AND WORST

MIXED FOOTBALL AT CAROLINE HILL

South China 2 R. Artillery 0

The brightest football and the poorest and most tiresome were served up at Caroline Hill. Dazzling combined movements with Lee Wai-tong at the top of his form enlivened the opening stages, but there was marked lack of finishing power by South China and it was not until Leung Fat-wing had been compelled to leave the field that the R. A. goal fell. This was after twenty-five minutes play, Cheng Sui-hong scoring from an unmarked position in front of goal.

Had Fung King-cheung and Chu Kwok-luen been members of the South China attack the side would have been two up in the first five minutes and at least four up by half-time. The R. A. were practically penned in their own half and bright and crisp passing with Lee Wai-tong and Ip Pak-wai tying their opponents in knots presented South China's centre-forward and inside-right with the easiest of chances. All of them were badly missed. Lee Wai-tong put in many good shots which usually suffered the fate of being charged down. R. A. could afford to be slack with the others in order to watch him and he had to be content, largely, with the job of making openings for his colleagues, who were skilful enough in making progress, but failed badly in their shooting.

The second half was about five minutes old when the South China centre-forward partially atoned for his errors by getting an unexpected goal from Lee Wai-tong's centre with a delightful shot on the run.

PLAY DETERIORATES.

Play by this time had already begun to deteriorate. The Artillery were rattled and resorted to unwholesome tactics, and the manner in which they were allowed to "get away" with flagrant tripping and ankle-tapping was astonishing. There could have been no excuse. These methods stopped South China playing football and for the last quarter of an hour they did not take the trouble to try. Lothargy seemed to pass over the whole side and while the forwards were content to demonstrate

MOTOR CYCLE TRIAL

STIFF TEST FOR COMPETITORS

ONLY 15 FINISH

Of the 34 entrants in the Hongkong Motor Cycle Reliability Trial which was held during the week-end only 15 completed the course. The route set was over a distance of 290 1/2 miles and was a stiff test not only of reliability but also of endurance. The event was run in four laps and in the last was included a secret section, the whereabouts of which was not disclosed to the competitors until the set out on the fourth lap from Castle Peak after breakfast on Sunday Morning.

This section included traversing a private road from half way down Lai-chikok Hill to Waterworks Hill. The average gradient of the hill was about one in five although in certain parts it was as steep as one in three. The surface was extremely rough and was crossed at points by concrete gulleys. About half way up there was a concrete slipway which presented a formidable obstacle, while many came to grief on account of the pot-holes in the road.

FOOT FAULTING.

Not one competitor made the ascent without foot-faulting but this was to be expected. It was originally intended that the hill be ascended twice but after the first attempt the officials decided to cut out the second attempt.

On account of the absence of water at the waterplash, that obstacle was also cut out of the programme.

The first cycle left at one minute after midnight and the other entrants left at minute intervals. The first cycle returned two minutes before his scheduled time, 1.19 p.m. on Sunday afternoon.

The committee responsible for the arrangements were Messrs. S. Rogers (Chairman), J. R. Way (Secretary), C. W. Brand (Treasurer), H. G. Williams, K. C. Hamilton, G. M. Lynn, A. J. Cash, E. H. Marriott, and H. E. Lewis, and they extend their heartfelt thanks to all who assisted as marshalls and observers during the trial.

The finishing times of the competitors who completed the course and the schedule times were as under:

	Actual	Schedule
Williams	1.18.50	1.20.
Whitley	1.21.50	1.22.
Spradbery	1.25.	1.25.
Dobernecker	1.25.	1.24.
Ribeiro	1.25.	1.24.
Rosario	1.27.	1.28.
Ng Chiu-too	1.30.	1.30.
Kew	1.38.	1.39.
Wong	1.39.	1.40.
Tapo	1.40.	1.41.
Lewis	1.40.	1.42.
Webb	1.54.	1.54.
Marriott	1.52.	1.55.

The only team to finish the course was the one composed of Kew, Tapo and Wong.

The committee responsible for organising the event were Messrs. S. Rogers (Chairman), J. R. Way (Secretary), C. W. Brand (Treasurer), H. G. Williams, K. C. Hamilton, G. M. Lynn, A. J. Cash, E. H. Marriott, and H. E. Lewis, and they extend their heartfelt thanks to all who assisted as marshalls and observers during the trial.

MAMAK HOCKEY ARTILLERY SET A FAST PACE

CONVINCING WIN BY INCOGS

THE LEAGUE TABLE

(By "Bully-Off".)

A fast pace was set by the 1st H.K.S. Battery in their Mamak fixture with the R.A.M.C. on the Marina ground on Saturday when they finished victors after a gruelling game by three goals to one. The score was a fair indication of the run of play.

The Battery made the most of the opportunities afforded them and displayed some brilliant stick-work. Notable in their front rank were the three inside men, Sgt. Beeston, Gujan Singh and Pretam Singh, the latter netting the three goals. The intermediate line frustrated many bursts by the Corps while the back defence did well. Although they adopted hard hitting tactics and more or less blind passing they seemed to get the ball just where a player was waiting.

CORPS SHORTCOMINGS.

The Corps on the other hand were weak in front of goal and faulty shooting deprived them of registering more than a single. As the game progressed their passing tended to become erratic. Some fine work was done by Major Anderson in the centre line while Timmis could always be relied upon in the rear defence. The left flank was weak at times and this was probably due to the re-arrangement of the team, it being necessary to put Cpl. Nicholson in this position. Notable absentees were Capt. Gore, who recently resigned his "post" as secretary of the H.K.T.C. to play for the Corps. I understand his absence was due to some delay in his re-registration as a playing member for that Club. Also missing from this forward line was Pte. Chittick, this forward being substituted by Pte. Wells.

AN EARLY LEAD.

The Battery took the lead within ten minutes of the initial bully-off when Kirtan-Vaughan, mis-hit in front of goal and could not recover in time to prevent Pretam Singh opening the account for the Battery. Certainly the H.K.S. Battery had the advantage and were continually on the offensive. When the R.A.M.C. did get going they found stubborn resistance in the opposing backs. It was during one of their occasional bursts that the equaliser was scored by L. Cpl. Smith following a corner. Shortly afterwards Pretam Singh gave the Battery the lead again.

Play after the interval was more evenly distributed although the Indians continued to be slightly superior. The Corps held out and occasionally their forwards gave the Battery defence some anxious moments. They came near to scoring after about twenty minutes play when Nicholson and Smith broke through, but when within striking distance they were robbed of possession by Mirza Khan. The Indians immediately transferred play to the other end where Pretam Singh completed the hat-trick.

The team were:

R.A.M.C.—Pte. Davies; S. M. Kirtan-Vaughan and Cpl. Timmis; Capt. Knight; Major Anderson and Cpl. Gore; Sgt. Garney, Pte. Wells, L. Cpl. Smith, Pte. Elkin and Cpl. Nicholson.

H.K.S. Battery—Mirza Khan; Jamada Amrick Singh, and Kishon Singh Bhan Singh, Tara Singh and Sunder Singh; Bakhtawar Singh, Guyan Singh, Sgt. Beeston, Pretam Singh and Jarian Shan.

INCOGS COMBINATION.

The failure of the H.M.S. Parthian team to cope with the fast movements of their opponents and the lack of cohesion on the part of the forwards were the factors responsible for the defeat of the Naval men at a tournament game on Saturday on the Naval ground.

During the first half the Civilians were definitely on top and in this half netted three of their four goals. They showed better and more effective combination and were quick to seize the opportunities that came their way.

The opening goal for the Incogots was scored by Barros after a clever bit of stick-work, and it was not long afterwards that Souza tested the Naval goal again. Evans cleared and with a first timer Pinto increased the Incogots lead. Just before the interval Barros netted his second with a shot which the goalkeeper deflected into the net. They only scored one further goal in the second half through Souza and thereafter were content to rest on their laurels. The Parthian men improved and before the end McKee reduced the lead to four goals to one.

TO-DAY'S FIXTURES.

The Tournament fixtures for to-day are:

India v German Club, Caroline Hill, 11.30 a.m.

H.M.S. Phoenix v R.A.S.C. U.R.S.C. (2.30).

H.M.S. Tamar v Royal Signals, King's Park (4.30).

L.T.A. ASKED TO CALL GENERAL MEETING

RESOLUTION WANTS IMMEDIATE STAGING OF TRIALS

REQUISITION BY FIVE CLUBS

(By "VERITAS".)

THAT tennis players in Hongkong are dissatisfied with the Interport selections is indicated by the latest development. A requisition, signed by five clubs affiliated to the Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association has been sent in to the Hon. Secretary calling for an extraordinary general meeting of the Association to consider the advisability of holding trials for the Interport against Shanghai on the 22nd and 23rd of his month.

Initiated by the Indian Recreation Club the requisition has the support of South China, Craigen-gower Cricket Club, the Y.M.C.A., and the Kowloon Indian Tennis Club.

I understand that the Hongkong Cricket Club has also indicated willingness to support the resolution when it comes before the general meeting of the affiliated clubs.

The request conforms with the Association's rule which demands that an extraordinary general meeting can be called if at least three clubs send the requisition to the Hon. Secretary in writing.

Correspondence in these columns during the past week has indicated how strong is public opinion in the matter of holding trials to determine the selection of Hongkong's Interport tennis team.

It is generally felt that the selectors came to their decisions without the aid of any recent data as to the form of the players, and if trials were held, that there would probably be several alterations necessary in the composition of the team.

Although time is short, there is positively no reason why the Association should not meet; if it decides in favour of the resolution, to hold trials, and if necessary to make new selections before the Interport is due to start.

With there being no ladies matches, it is pretty certain that the contest will not begin until Saturday week, which leaves the L.T.A. almost a fortnight in which to carry out the wishes of its affiliated members.

MORE SUGGESTIONS.

I have received the following letter in connexion with the Hongkong Interport team:

After studying the personnel of the teams representing Hongkong and Shanghai, my opinion is that the chances of either side winning the Interport should be fairly even. Hongkong's team appears to be slightly weaker, but our chance will depend on the right players we pit against our visitors.

If I were captain of the Hongkong side, I would put S. A. Rumsdell against John Wade, Fincher or H. D. Rumsdell against Guy Cheng, and H. K. Lau against Gordon Lum. Personally I prefer "H.D." to Fincher for this reason, that while Fincher is very much off colour just now, "H.D." is playing just as good, if not a better game than before. Besides, "H.D." is the type of player who will beat Guy Cheng, and I am very confident that he would. Fincher too, stands a good chance, but it will depend on the make of balls we are going to use. I am sure Fincher agrees with me that he is very much better off with Slazengers than with any other kind. I put Ho Ka-lau against Gordon Lum for the simple reason that I believe if any member of our team were to beat Gordon, He stands just as good a chance. He may not be as good as others, but he is a sticer and has the stamina, and that is the player we want for Gordon.

NOT BAD CHOICE.

Of the doubles, I don't think that the Lo brothers as a pair is a bad choice, considering that we have no other pairs which have proved to be any better. We may get together two players who may play a wonderful game one day and a rotten game the next. In doubles, it is a game of understanding, and it is always safer to choose a pair which has played together for some time.

As to how the pairs are matched, I would put the Lo brothers against Lum and Cheng and the Rumsdells against Wade and Canavaro—Yours, etc., "THE CHAMP".

HOLIDAY CRICKET.

Taking advantage of the holiday day, the Hongkong Club and the Kowloon C.C. both engaged in two-day matches on Saturday afternoon.

The former met the Volunteers, and at the close of play the Volunteers were 94 runs in arrears with nine wickets in hand.

The Kowloon C.C. were engaged in an inter-club match, and E.O. Fincher's eleven is in a commanding position.

The newly formed Army team were considerably weakened by the absence of many prominent players when they met the Indian R.C. at Soekampoo, and suffered a heavy defeat. The Indian R.C. players also won easily from the R. & A. C.C.

Cup Presented.

At the conclusion of the match Mr. E. W. Hamilton, Superintendent of Imports and Exports, presented the cup and replicas to each of the winning team and spoons to the runners-up.

Mr. A. W. Grimmitt, secretary of the competition, explained that the Cup was presented in 1926 by S. J. Clarke Esq. in memory of his brother, Goscombe, and Mortimer O'Sullivan who were shot during the Gresson Street robbery. It was originally presented for competition for one team from each Government Department but this year they had broken away from the rule and the Public Works Department had sporadically entered three teams, the Sanitary and the Police two each while Government House had also competed, bringing the total number of teams to 14.

Before presenting the cup to Mr. Grimmitt, Mr. Hamilton congratulated the winners and commented upon the sporting attitude of the Public Works Department in entering three teams, otherwise they would have eaten up the other teams.

The Kowloon C.C. were engaged in an inter-club match, and E.O. Fincher's eleven is in a commanding position.

ST. PAUL'S GIRLS' SCHOOL BAZAAR

In aid of the Ministering Children's League, the annual bazaar of the St. Paul's Girls' School was held at the school on Saturday, and was opened by Mrs. Southorn, wife of His Excellency the Officer Administering the Government (Hon. Mr. W. T. Southorn, C.M.G.).

Addressing the large gathering prior to calling upon Mrs. W. T. Southorn to open the bazaar, the Hon. Mr. B. H. Kotewall said:

Mrs. Southorn, ladies and gentlemen—Yesterday Mrs. Southorn had a strenuous and tiring afternoon, and yet she is here to-day, cheerfully shouldering another burden of public service! Her unbounded enthusiasm for good objects no doubt gives her that energy which is the envy of even the stronger sex. Her practical interpretation of the Girl Guide's aim—to do one good deed a day—has exceeded the mark ever since her arrival in the Colony, for we know that Mrs. Southorn does many good deeds every day; and by coming here to open this Bazaar she has added another to the amazingly long list that stands to her credit. (Applause.) Yet it is only to be expected that a function which had such worthy objects as the one this afternoon—to benefit charitable institutions such as the M.C.L., the Blind Home, the Victoria Orphanage and the Netherdale Hospital, and the College Library and Sports Funds—should have Mr. Southorn's sympathy and support. I hope that those who have gathered here to-day will give the many attractions their patronage, and thus contribute the needed money and gladden the hearts of the hard-working ladies and girls who have put in so much of their time in getting up this Bazaar. The best way to bring smiles of pleasure to their faces will be to leave the stalls bare and the collecting bags full. (Heart, heart.)

I now have the pleasure of calling upon Mrs. Southorn to declare the Bazaar open. (Applause.)

GENEVA SQUABBLE

FIGHT FOR JOBS IN THE LEAGUE SECRETARIAT

Geneva, Oct. 9.
 The re-organisation of the League Secretariat which has become crucial through the impending retirement of Sir Eric Drummond, aroused agitated discussions among members of the special committee sitting in secret session until the early hours of this morning.

A general agreement has practically been reached which gives France the office of Secretary-General, and a small State, possibly Norway, that of the Deputy Secretaryship.

Four under-secretaries will be appointed instead of the present three and one of them will be British.

The additional cost will be defrayed by a reduction in salaries, but Italy opposes the scheme as she was not offered the deputy secretaryship. —Reuter's Special.

MAN POISONED

YOUNG CHINESE TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

Suffering from the effects of acid poisoning, Tam Yiu 23, was admitted to the Government Civil Hospital last night in a critical condition.

Shortly before 10 p.m., the manager of the Hang Ho Boarding House, Connaught Road telephone Central Police Station. He said that one of his residents had suddenly contracted a mysterious illness and appeared to be in a very bad condition.

A plain clothes officer found the sick man in a fourth floor cubicle. He immediately caused the ambulance to be summoned and had the man rushed to hospital. Although conscious, Tam Yiu was suffering intense pain. He was detained for treatment, after his malady had been diagnosed as acid poisoning.

CHINA CROSSROADS

REV. ALLEN LECTURES TO UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

"Whose is the guilt of what has happened in Manchuria? It is that of the proud, armed nations of the West, who have taught the East that a nation is great, according to its power to subject alien populations, and that it will be honoured by its extent of its territories, no matter how these have been acquired."

These were some of the remarks of Rev. E. L. Allen in a lecture at the University last evening on "China at the Crossroads."

Rev. Allen said: "The problem which confronts China at the moment, smarting as she is under what has happened in Manchuria, seems at first sight insoluble, except by war. Yet war can offer no solution. It might give back Manchuria, but at what a cost. It would be at the cost of China's own conversion to the creed of violence and hatred and unreasonableness which were meant to be of service one to the other. If you go to war, you can only defeat the militarism which threatens you from the enemy country as you are willing to set up a yet greater militarism in your own country. Do not think that you can keep war within the limits of self-defence. You cannot. With whatever ideals you begin war, in a short time you will have discarded those ideals and become as brutally aggressive and as careless of elementary human rights as all other nations have been when they took up the sword."

But, you will say, what else can we do? We cannot tamely surrender, an unworthy compromise would be worse than war, and there is no other way. There is another, a Christian and a very practical way. Let me speak of those who have chosen this way for themselves and their peoples.

Prussia's Example.

"When in 1806 Prussia found herself a mere fief of France, one of the measures which she proposed was—the foundation of the University of Berlin. In 1807 Fichte delivered in the capital his famous 'Addresses to the German Nation.' We have been defeated, he said, on the battle-field, let us carry the conflict into the realm of the spirit, and we shall win. Let us revive the old German traditions, let us remove from private and public life the selfishness and party-spirit that were worse foes to us than the French have ever been, and let us give ourselves to the deliberate effort by a new system of education and a freely-accepted national discipline, to create within 25 years a new Germany which shall bring in a new humanity. Happy for Prussia if she had not listened at the same time to other counsels than this."

"In the first half of last century, Denmark became acutely conscious of the fact that she could no longer rank as a great Power. So she chose for herself a better part and under the leadership of patriots like Grundtvig and Christen Fold became a new kind of nation, a model for the rest of the world. The first Folk High School was opened on the southern frontier as a spiritual fortification against Germany. It was a school in which young men and women would be taught to love Denmark's past and to go forward bravely into the future, to work for a State which should love justice and be indifferent to power. But the great movement towards the foundations of these Schools for the making of a new nation came in 1864, when Denmark lay prostrate before the armed coalition of Austria and Prussia."

Gandhi's Aims.

"Go with Gandhi to-day into an Indian village. There are five evils, he tells the people, from which India must be delivered—drink and opium, the inequality of the sexes, the Hindu-Muslim conflict, the poverty of the agricultural population, and the bitter

OVERTURES FOR ALLIANCE REPORTED REJECTED

London, Oct. 9.

The offer of a formal alliance to France was made by the Japanese Government some weeks ago, according to the Sunday Times, which says that the offer was carefully examined, at Quai d'Orsay but that all idea of acceptance was abandoned after a veteran French diplomatist, with considerable experience of Far Eastern affairs, had emphatically expressed the opinion that such acceptance would be "dishonourable."

It was considered it would be a breach of faith with the other Powers affected to conclude such an alliance while the Lytton Commission was still investigating. —Reuter.

Official Doubts.

Paris, Oct. 9.

French official circles have no knowledge of the reported offer of a Franco-Japanese alliance. They strongly doubt that such an offer was made. —Reuter.

Ambassadors Meet

Tokyo, Oct. 9.

Manchukuo Ambassador, is reported to have called on the Soviet Ambassador, M. Trotsky, yesterday, and to have had a conference with him for an hour and a half on various Soviet-Manchukuo problems.

Mr. Pao Kuan-cheng, the first According to Press reports negotiations for the conclusion of a non-aggression pact between the Soviet, Manchukuo and Japan are to be launched shortly at Tokyo. —Reuter.

C.E.R. to Resume

Harbin, Oct. 9.

According to instructions by M. Rudy, manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway, the train service with Pograditchnaya will be resumed to-day.

This announcement is surprising owing to there being absolutely no change in the general situation on the Eastern line where combating forces control the railway from Pograditchnaya and Hentaohtze, excluding Hal-lun. —Reuter.

MRS. KEITH MILLER TO LEAVE AMERICA.

CHARGES AGAINST HER DROPPED

Washington, Oct. 8.

No charges will be entered against Mrs. Keith Miller and Captain Lancaster as a result of an investigation into reports that they were connected with a ring for smuggling aliens into the United States from the West Indies.

This decision is announced by the Labour department which also dismissed the deportation warrants against them on the understanding that they leave America voluntarily by October 14. —Reuter.

[Captain Lancaster was recently acquitted of a charge of killing another airman, Hadyn Clark, who was engaged to marry Mrs. Miller. Clark apparently committed suicide.]

shame of the outcaste. The way to Swaraj, he says, is through the removal of these evils by non-violence.

"The true defence of a country against external aggression is the re-birth of that country from within. Can China not produce from her educated youth a Fichte, a Grundtvig, or a Gandhi? What she needs is a great spiritual movement, I do not mean necessarily a Christian one. There is a new sense of unity among her people, in her remotest villages there is a fresh concern for the welfare of the whole, and everywhere national sentiment has been quickened by recent injuries. Who will rise up to turn all this to the good of China and to the injury of none, not even of her worst enemy?"

WHITFIELD BARRACKS

Their picturesque costumes and variegated turbans adding bright splashes of colour to the belagged grounds at Whitfield Barracks, the Hindu section of the famous Jat Regiment, held their religious festival of Dusehra, or Vijel Dashmi on Saturday.

The festivities, which commenced at 9 a.m. on Saturday, did not end until 9 p.m., the main portion, from 10.30 a.m. onwards, being taken up with the procession.

Many Europeans, including the G.O.C. British Troops, Maj. Gen. J. W. Sandilands, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., were interested spectators of the festivities.

Saturday was the 108th anniversary, and was celebrated with due religious rites, British colours and officers' awards were worshipped and blessed, and Gods were invoked. To them prayers were offered for the eternity of the British Raj, and the welfare and health of Their Imperial Majesties, the King Emperor and Queen, and the members of the Royal Family.

While the Hindus worshipped before the temple on the consecrated portion of the parade ground, interested European spectators looked down upon them from the parade above, and the Moslems, their plain white garb offering a subdued contrast to the picturesqueness of the Hindu worshippers, lined the outskirts.

Kindling the Sacred Fire.
The ceremony of Hawan, or the kindling of the sacred fire, commenced at 9 a.m., and the guests began to arrive an hour later. For fifteen minutes after the arrival of the guests, the Hawan ceremony continued, the assembled worshippers chanting a refrain to the prayers of the priest. At 10.20 a.m., the ceremony of the kindling of the fire having concluded, prayers were offered for their Imperial Majesties the King Emperor and Queen and thereafter the priest delivered a short lecture in Hindu on the ceremony, this portion coinciding with the sermon of a Christian service.

As the sermon concluded the Pipe Band of the Jat Regiment, preceded by the Colour Bearer, marched on to the parade ground. The assemblage rose as the Colour Bearer, marching up to the temple, stood stiffly at attention. Then the inspiring ceremony of the Blessing of the Colours, Swords, and Arms took place, followed immediately afterwards by "Aarti," or the chant for the prosperity of the arms for the coming year.

As the chant ended the assembled ranks opened out, and with perfect precision the Colour Bearer stepped at a slow march through the ranks, parading the Colours. As the Regimental Flags passed each of the worshippers bowed his head in reverence.

Spectators Garlanded.
Fully ten minutes were occupied in marching the Colours through all the ranks, and then the ceremony of "Parashad," or the giving of fruit and sweetmeats to the children of guests, and the garlanding of the spectators with fresh flowers, took place, the Hindu Indian Officers performing this ceremony.

Major General J. W. Sandilands, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., was garlanded by the Senior Hindoo Officer, Subadar Sudhan.

The ceremony, as far as the spectators were concerned, then ended with the Grand Parade, and Demonstration of the Colours, the procession being preceded by the Pipe Band, and followed by all Indian officers and ranks. Normally this parade, which lasts for

BLUE STAR LINER
IN COLLISION.ACCIDENT WITH NORWEGIAN
SHIP IN CHANNEL

London, Oct. 9.
The Blue Star liner Afric Star, en route to Buenos Aires, has sent out an S.O.S. reporting a collision in the English Channel off Dungeness with a Norwegian vessel, the Charente.

The crew of the Charente have been transferred to the Afric Star, which, although damaged, is now proceeding to London.—Reuter.

Charente Sinks.

London, Oct. 9.
The Charente, which was bound for Oslo from Spain, sank shortly after the crew and passengers were taken off by the Afric Star, which arrived in London mid-day. Its bows were badly dented above the waterline, with one of the Charente's boats hanging on it.—Reuter.

The s.s. Afric Star is a vessel of 6,542 net tonnage. She was built in 1926 at Newcastle and is registered at the Port of London.

ALLEGED REVOLT
PLOT CHECKED.CROATIANS ARRESTED AND DISARMED

Belgrade, Oct. 9.
So far 120 have been arrested in northern Dalmatia following the discovery by the Yugo Slav police of an alleged large-scale plot to arm the Croatian people preparatory to a revolution next spring.

It is alleged that considerable quantities of arms were landed from an Italian submarine in a secluded bay on the Dalmatian coast, and that they were widely distributed among the peasants who were carrying out drilling and exercising in military formations.

The Croat leader, Pernar and eight others have been arrested on a charge of printing and illegally distributing pamphlets designed to stir up a revolution.

In the meantime a force of 1,000 gendarmes are carrying out searches and confiscating arms.—Reuter.

SEAMEN'S STRIKE
THREATENED.MANY UNABLE TO LEAVE FOR FAR EAST

Marseilles, Oct. 9.
Many British seamen are among the passengers who are unable to sail for destinations on the near and far East owing to a dispute between the Messageries Maritimes Co. and the seamen, culminating in the Seamen's Union decision to strike, following the Ministry of Merchant Marine stoppage of certain allowances. Unless agreement is reached shortly, a general strike affecting all companies is expected.—Reuter.

FRIGHTENED
WOMENTHE WINCHELSEA
LAGOON

Winchelsea, Sept. 8.

An anxious time has been spent this weekend by the occupants of some of the bungalows at Winchelsea owing to the invasion of their holiday homes by the sea at high tide.

In the darkness the water rushed through a gap in the shingled bank and the occupants of some of the houses left to seek other accommodation.

This afternoon the sea at high tide rushed through the gap again, and at one bungalow the occupants went on to the roof to keep dry.

"We had our lunch to-day in eight inches of water," said Mr. W. S. Greeves, of Surbiton, who is staying in the bungalow. "The sea completely surrounded us on Saturday and again this afternoon. It rushes in at high tide with a roar and rushes out with a roar again. On Saturday night my wife and I went into the town to sleep. The children liked the adventure, but some of the women don't like the idea of being on an island in the sea."

The sea has made an inland lake of considerable depth in the bungalow town.

As the sea rushed out this afternoon it made miniature waterfalls down the sloping banks and swept away a footpath over a little bridge.

On Saturday night many of the women here were frightened by the noise of the water and the high wind, but to-day the sea has been calm and the sun was shining.

"This beach," said one man, "at one time was under the sea and unless something is done it looks as if it is going back. If it does come over this shingle bank it may reach houses half a mile away."

LINER'S CREW
ON STRIKETEMPORARY HOLD-UP IN CHANNEL

The second largest liner in the Dutch Mercantile Marine, the Rotterdam (24,149 tons) was held up in the English Channel last month because of the crew's refusal to allow her to enter any port except Rotterdam, where there is a seamen's strike.

The Rotterdam is owned by the Holland-America Line and was homeward bound from New York. She was expected in Southampton to land such passengers as did not leave the ship when she called at Plymouth.

Owing to labour troubles in Holland the owners intended that the vessel should end her voyage across the Atlantic either at London or at Southampton, as it was feared that if the vessel reached Rotterdam her crew would join the seamen on strike there.

An official of Messrs. Escombe, McGrath and Co., the Southampton agents of the Holland-America Line, said that messages had been received from the Rotterdam that the crew had declined to work the ship into any port other than Rotterdam.

Later, however, the owners accepted the position, and allowed the liner to proceed to the Dutch port.

It is sensationally revealed that an enormous mineralised zone containing gold in massive quartz sulphide reefs, silver, copper, lead, zinc, iron, asbestos and mica was discovered by Mr. Bon Durant, the American airman, in the hinterland of Labrador when searching for timber last year.

He has just concluded with the Government an arrangement for exclusive prospecting privileges in a limited area, and the Government is awaiting further results before opening up the territory for general prospecting.—Reuter.

UNANIMOUS PLEA OF GUILTY

BATCH OF BEGGARS IN COURT

A chorus of "Yes" greeted the charge, indicating an understanding between 25 mendicants who were charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court to-day.

The more exuberant spirits who took upon themselves to say "Yes, we are all guilty, men women and children," were repressed only when his Worship pointed a warning pen at them.

According to "Sub-Inspector Cunningham, the whole company were arrested in the course of a police drive in Aberdeen on Saturday, when hundreds of pilgrims climbing the hills during the Chung Yang festivities were followed by these parasites. A similar incident was also to be seen on this side of the Peak, but it is reported that as the police van was not available, being engaged elsewhere, and as the number of these beggars ran up to dozens, nothing could be done. Those brought into Court were, with one or two exceptions, all convicted and fined in amounts ranging from $3 to $7.

PLANE WRECKAGE FOUND

MOST LIKELY THE "AMERICAN NURSE"

New York Oct. 6. A message from Williams Port states that Mrs. Newcomer, mother of Edna Newcomer, passenger on the missing aeroplane, American Nurse, revealed to-day that she had been advised that wreckage of a plane had been seen off the Azores which likely was the one in which her daughter presumably lost her life.

The American Nurse, piloted by William Ulbrich, and carrying Miss Newcomer and Dr. Leon M. Pisculli, left New York September 13 for Rome, and was sighted by three vessels, the last one reporting the aeroplane's position from 450 miles northwest of the Azores. Nothing more was heard from the plane until to-day.

Mrs. Newcomer said she received the advice from her nephew, Albert Neichael.

COMMANDER OF SIXTH ARMY

ENTERTAINED IN HONGKONG

Commander Au Shao-nin, officer commanding the 78th Division of the 19th Route Army, which took part in the Shanghai hostilities early this year, is now in Hongkong. He was the guest of honour at a dinner party given by prominent Chinese last evening at the Chung Wah Restaurant, while this afternoon he will be entertained at a reception in the Gloucester Building, given by Fokien merchants.

In an address given at one of the receptions in his honour, Commander Au strongly recommended the suppression of bandits and the promotion of native industries. This, together with a strong and united Government and a loyal and well-organised Army at its back, would be to China's advantage.

Commander Au is on his way to Fokien to join the Nineteenth Route Army in the bandit suppression campaign.

REPARATIONS AND WAR DEBTS

LABOUR PARTY ASKS CANCELLATION

London, Oct. 6. The Labour Party, holding its annual conference at Leicester, to-day passed a resolution unanimously demanding immediate negotiations for the cancellation of war debts and reparations. The resolution stipulated Britain should not pay or receive another pound for reparations or war debts.

The decision marked the crystallization of strong sentiment here behind such a proposal. However, Britain is still predominantly in favour of fulfilment of all obligations until readjustments can be made which are mutually acceptable.

The Kowloon Tong Rifle Range on Sunday, October 16th, at 10.00 a.m. Members will assemble at the Range at that time.
